Gill Has Boaters Covered With New IN5 Cruising Line
Plus New OS5 Key West & OS4 Atlantic Ranges

Buford, GA, June 12, 2006 – Gill North America, famous for its foul-weather gear, has developed a new IN5 cruising line of high-performance marine apparel as well as Key West and Atlantic ranges that provide excellent weather protection for all boaters, from the inshore cruiser to the ocean voyager and racer.

New for 2006 is the IN5Cruise Jacket and Cruise Trousers, primarily designed for coastal, inshore wear and both pieces are versatile all-around gear for inshore and general boating as well.

Gill also has improved its famous OS5 Key West Range by giving it a high level of breathability with its 3 Dot™, two-layer fabric that protects against all types of abrasion. Gill's OS4 Atlantic Jacket is a favorite for ocean boaters who appreciate the full protection of the high wrap-around face guard and the stowaway hood that helps them stay dry even in the wettest conditions.

For ocean boaters on deck for long periods in harsh weather, Gill Atlantic Range offers the highest degree of storm protection. First introduced in 1984, this sixth generation of the Atlantic Jacket is made from a highly breathable and durable 3-layer 5 Dot fabric that protects against abrasion.

"Gill has cultivated a reputation for developing a line of cruising apparel that is breathable, tough and durable, yet very easy and comfortable to wear, with great freedom of movement," said David Pritchard, Gill North America president. "In 2006, we continue to expand our line with the new IN5Cruise Jacket and Trousers that is made to withstand the ultimate tests of wet, windy weather that passionate boaters can encounter."
